New Western House

In the second phase of the musculoskeletal conditions of the equine and treatment of these disorders requires a strategic design focus. To assist in the design and development of these services, the Lister Institute and the British Equine Research Centre have entered into a research collaboration. This project will focus on studying the equine musculoskeletal system and its response to injury and disease.

The new Western House will have accommodation for up to 1200
students in 110 living rooms, each with en-suite facilities. The campus includes a state-of-the-art study centre, library, and catering facilities. The building will open in 2005.

The building is designed to meet the requirements of the European Union and is compliant with all
environmental standards.
Campus and New Building

Opening Ceremonies - 6:30 PM

The College of Veterinary Medicine and the School of Veterinary Medicine are proud to announce the opening of the new building. The building will provide state-of-the-art facilities for education, research, and patient care. The building will be dedicated to the memory of Dr. John A. Blakely, who served as the college's dean for over 25 years.

The dedication ceremony will feature remarks by the college's executive dean, Dr. Richard H. Johnson, and other special guests. The event will be followed by a reception in the new building's lobby.

Please join us in celebrating this exciting moment in the college's history.

Alumni News

We are excited to announce the opening of the new building. The college has long been a leader in veterinary education and research, and the new building will further enhance our ability to provide top-quality education and care.

The new building features state-of-the-art facilities, including new classrooms, laboratories, and clinical spaces. The building also includes a new auditorium, which will be used for lectures, presentations, and other events.

The building is named in honor of Dr. John A. Blakely, who served as the college's dean for over 25 years. Dr. Blakely's dedication to the college and the veterinary profession is deeply appreciated.

We encourage our alumni to visit the new building and to participate in the dedication ceremony. The event will be held on [date and time].

Graduates and their work has been truly remarkable. The college has a long history of producing leaders in the veterinary profession, and we are proud to have played a role in their education and training.

We encourage our alumni to stay connected with the college and to support its programs. Your contributions are crucial to the college's continued success.

Thank you for your support and for being a part of our veterinary community.

The College of Veterinary Medicine
Textbooks and nostalgia

The year was 1950. I was 10 years old. It all started with a book. My father brought home a book from his work. It was a big book, with thick pages and lots of pictures. I was fascinated. I started reading it, and from that moment, I knew I wanted to be a writer.

Over the years, I have collected many books. They are my treasure, my friends. They have taken me to places I never knew existed. I have learned about the world and its people through their stories. Each book is like a door that opens to a new world.

When I was a child, books were my escape. They took me away from the realities of life and allowed me to dream. I remember spending hours lost in the pages, my mind running wild with possibilities.

Books have been myConstant companion. They have taught me, comforted me, and inspired me. They have been my friends, my teachers, and my mentors.

As I grow older, I still hold on to my favorite books. They are a reminder of the journey I have taken and the person I have become. I will continue to read and write, for books are the best friends we can have.
